One of the finest observatories in Europe is now almost completed at Nice, and the work of observation has already commenced, under the direction of M. Perrotin, the French astronomer who conducted the expedition to Patagonia for the observation of the transit of Venus. The importance of this new undertaking may be judged of from the fact that more than £80,000 has already been spent upon it, and the total onst, when all is complete, will not fall far short of £120,000. This enterprise is due entirely to the munificence of M. 'IMPERIAL QUARTO. TANGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN. PRONUNCIATION.

An Angle-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office. Hongkong For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises | Captain Sommers, will be despatched as above for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the ascents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size STEAM TO SHANGHAL of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of THE P. & O. S. N. Co.'s Steamship space, sobieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those wast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration: Chalmers' Vecabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characother elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely re-1661 quires examples to display the various appli- will leave for the above place on THURSDAY cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese." In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives | THE Company's Steamship themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted.
To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion.

A TASTE FOR READING. There never was a time when so much roading was done, but, nevertheless, the number of those who may be said to have a real taste for it is comparatively small. The period of year is now coming on us again when such a taste is especially valuable. Whatever may be thought about it when the country is in its prime, and all Nature seems to be doing her best to win people ! from sedentary pursuits and indoor life. reading, it must be allowed, is an occupation very suitable for a season when circumstances are driving everybody to the fireside to warm themselves as best they may. what the majority do with the greatest case. People are very unequal in this way. Some are at, times conscious of a lack of more muscular ability to steadily follow a printed page, and there are those with whom this forbleness is chronic and constitutional instead of being the result of fatigue or indisposition. To many persons, indeed to most persons, the muscular and physical, as well na the thenful, effort of three or four hours, reading is anormous—far more serious than the limbitual reader can realise. Those who have grown up in the habit of constant reading would be surprised, perhaps, at the labour involved in the perusal of a book for any considerable time even by fairly educated people who are hot and never have been habitual readers. Those whom long custom has made expert areable to read, all unconscious of letters or even individual words. "Inconsiderable" is not with them a word of fourteen letters or six syliables; it is a mere hieroglyphic the significance of which is suggested partly from the length and form of the word, and partly from the context. But perhaps it is not too much to say that to the great mass of readera-these who only-read occasionally-it. is absolutely necessary that the eye shall be actually focussed on most of those fourteen letters before any significance can be derived from them. It is not until long practice has rendered a reader altogether unconscious of the print before him, that a taste for reading can be considered likely to be permanent and abiding, and if the truth could always be known, we should most likely be amazed at HE the smallness of the number of those who are thus qualified for the performance of such a task. The number of persons who can read with toterable fluency is no doubt large, but the number of those who read by instinct, as it were, is probably very small comparatively speaking, and the are they only ones at all likely to find supreme pleasure in bolting upon them the door of a library and taking their seat, as old Heinsius, put it in the very lap of eternity."-Globe.

On disturbing them there fell from the THE lower jaw of one two gold coins of the reign of Charles VIII. of France, at the end of the ly in the 15th century. Further search revealed the presence in the bony hand of the skeleton of a piece of linen rag in excellent preservation, and on unfolding the rag the men brought to light ten silver coins of the 16th century, of the time of Francois I. of France. It is supposed that the skeleton is that of a soldier, who fought at the battle of Marignan, and that having stolen some money and put the gold coins in his mouth for safety, he was immediately after killed on the field
